BLURB:

I commenced in the outdoor industry about 25 years ago working initially for the Department of Community Welfare as a youth worker. Part of this role was running outdoor based personnel growth programmes for youth on their release from incarceration. During this time I also worked running adventure holiday programmes for local government and freelancing in the field for schools and adventure companies. In 1993 I purchased Dwellingup Adventurers. The company now has about 8 full time staff. My goal is to take a step back from operations and focus on training and new business directions with an Adventure Tourism focus. When not upside down in his kayak on the river my great joy is gardening and maintaining the family property in Dwellingup.
